Objects of God's Wrath

Revelation 16 contains the story of the seven angels who poured out their seven bowls. These bowls represent God's wrathful judgment on those that worship the beast. After the third bowl is poured out, we have this interlude of praise to God:

And I heard the angel of the waters saying: "You are righteous, O Lord, The One who is and who was and who is to be, Because You have judged these things. For they have shed the blood of saints and prophets, And You have given them blood to drink. For it is their just due." And I heard another from the altar saying, "Even so, Lord God Almighty, true and righteous are Your judgments" (Revelation 16:5-7).

We learn in Revelation 17:15 that the waters "are peoples and multitudes and nations and languages." These are those who "did not repent and give Him glory," and "did not repent of their deeds" (Revelation 16:9, 11).

The irony of this passage is that those guilty of bloodshed are given blood to drink as punishment. The implication is that their punishment fits their crime. This is how God dispenses justice to the wicked; each one will be punished according to his wickedness. This means that God's judgments are true and righteous because He will not punish anyone more than he deserves.

This set of judgments given against the wicked in this chapter is final because Jesus is King over His Kingdom (Revelation 11:15). All will be judged by the words of Christ (John 12:48). This means there is no other standard that will excuse mankind of its wicked behavior. Christ is the final standard of judgment. Let's use that standard to live for Him so that when judgment comes, we won't be objects of God's wrath.

God bless you, and I love you!

God Has Looked Down From Heaven

"The fool has said in his heart, 'There is no God.' They are corrupt, and have committed abominable injustice; there is no one who does good. God has looked down from heaven upon the sons of men to see if there is anyone who understands, who seeks after God. Every one of them has turned aside; together they have become corrupt; there is no one who does good, not even one. Have the workers of wickedness no knowledge, who eat up My people as though they ate bread and have not called upon God?" (Psalm 53:1-4).

One of the clearest pictures of the corruption of the human race, of sin taking human form, is given in this psalm. Paul found the description (in this psalm or in Psalm 14) useful in describing the sinfulness of the entire human race (Rom. 3:12- 14). The depiction begins with a corruption of the mind. Sin dominates and reigns over minds that should be committed to seeking out and loving God's will. Instead of the heart being an instrument in God's service, it becomes the devil's incubator where sin's eggs are hatched. Furthermore, the passion for doing good is turned into a sinister craving for that which is improper. With sin in control, unholy and destructive ambitions arise within to be the fountainhead that produces a perverse lifestyle. Following in the wake of all of this, the sacred interest in walking with God dies. The text says, "God has looked down from heaven upon the sons of men to see if there is any who understands, who seeks after God," and the implication is that He did not find them. Sin and godliness cannot have a peaceful co-existence. They war against each other until one wins out and takes control. Then, there are the hands. Having taken over the mind, the passions, and the holy desires, sin commandeers the hands. Of them it can be said, "They have committed abominable injustice." God says in amazement, "Have the workers of wickedness no knowledge, who eat up My people as though they ate bread and have not called upon God?" (v. 4).

Key Thought: This description of the psalm is primarily a photograph of the end result of practical atheism, but it is only a short step to branch out from this context and use this text as a characterization of the general sinfulness of the human race, as Paul did in Romans 1.
